It is 2 feet and 2 1/4 inches long. A clarinet uses a reed to produce a tone. Overall, the clarinet may be one of the most, if not the most versatile instrument in any band or orchestra because of its huge range and different sounds as you change through the octaves. When played correctly, all the octaves can sound beautiful.

In a big band (also known as a jazz orchestra, stage band, or show band) there are five saxophones: two alto saxophones, two tenor saxophones, and one baritone saxophone. Each part gets its own line in the score. It is also common for players to 'double' on flutes and clarinets. The default doubling is that the altos play.

Say I was interested in clarinet as played by Woody Herman, Artie Shaw & other big-band (& hot jazz) era clarinetists. What did they play? I've heard there were a couple of . (About 1/3 of my old Conns are nice horns, the other 2/3 are parts horns) If you want to experience what a big bore clarinet plays like.

I hate to be negative, but there isn't a sax in a Dixieland band. In ensemble choruses trumpet takes the tune, clarinet arpeggios over the top, trombone fills in the middle with plenty of trademark glissandi. And if you want the Dixieland style, that's it. I've just spent some time on YouTube hoping to prove myself wrong. I couldn't.

24 Nov 2017 . One of the more diverse instrumentalists of the swing and big band eras, Jimmy Dorsey started his musical career as a trumpeter in Shenandoah, Pennsylvania.
